Review

"An End-Time fabulation in the lineage of Burroughs and Ballard: complex, fast-twitch language spasms, loud with interference and radio static. The voices of the new dead transmit warp knowledge. Straight-blade satire. Deadpan humours. A word quest launched from the edge-lands of arcane knowledge." -- Iain Sinclair --

"...a stream of the funniest, most hip and haunting prose, where the DNA dialogue and descriptive powers of Ken Kesey, James Joyce, Lawrence Durrell and JD Salinger are fused into the tissue of the fiction a tale from the Old (stranger-than-fiction) Country to take its place beside those of Doug Coupland, Bill Gibson and Spider Robinson..." -- George McWhirter --

"I am happy to have an opportunity to say that The Qliphoth is magnificent, both in range and depth of arcane snoopage. When Paul was my student in the drear wilds of Canada, I said to him and a few of his grad school cronies this about style: 'First you learn the rules perfectly, then break them magnificently.' And now we have this novel to prove he was listening." -- J. Michael Yates

"What impresses me most about The Qliphoth is the vividness of Paul Green's narrative detail, the physical description, the purity of his language. It really is wonderful to read such focused, beautifully paced, freshly minted writing." -- George Amabile
