Review

"This is an excellent book which is worthy of a second edition. It is intended to be thought-provoking and it certainly achieves that aim. One of its strengths is that it not only challenges our thinking, but it also uses mathematics to tie the ideas down."

Robert Bean, Lighting Research & Technology

On the first edition:

"A breath taking tour de force" - The International Journal of Lighting Research and Technology

"This book provides an excellent addition to the lighting design library." - Professional Lighting Design Magazine

"Anyone looking for a practical guide to architectural lighting will do well to purchase a copy of this book." - Lighting & Sound Magazine

"This is an extremely interesting book, written in a pleasing style. It makes an outstanding contribution to the subject." - Robert Bean, author of Lighting Engineering

"This book is aimed at architects, lighting designers and building services engineers with a passion for lighting. There is a lot of good stuff on visual perception" - Lighting Equipment News

"a great read... will be invaluable to serious lighting students and lighting designers."

Professor Warren Julian in 'Lighting' journal
(IESANZ)

"provides a very comprehensive overview of key lighting related topics including vision, characteristics of lighting and visual perception" - Society of Light and Lighting Newsletter

"a very successful addition to the lighting library" - Society of Light and Lighting Newsletter

"invaluable reference point for various subjects in lighting and a very interesting and useful read." - Society of Light and Lighting Newsletter
