From the Author

I've watched so many people struggle with keeping fresh knowledge flowing into their work and lives. They see the tidal wave coming at them and don't realize that the secret is to learn how to ride the current, not try to stop it. I've watched managers flounder as they try to figure out how to keep their staff current when the training budget has been cut - again. I've learned the secrets from more than 30 years as a manager. And, I've included stories from more than 35 people from around the world in many walks of life, from age 17 to 82. Their stories are evidence of all the ways it is possible. Every reader finds something of value to add to their toolkit from these stories. Some say working through the book changed their lives. All say they save time. I had to write this book (and the companion workbook coming out shortly). So, relax. You can't stop the wave of information coming at you. You can learn to ride it in style.

From the Back Cover

"Riding the Current Lays out technique after technique for staying abreast of everything that is relevant, navigating the overwhelming sea of knowledge, and using it all to your advantage." -Seth Kahan, Visionary Leadership

"Madelyn Blair has written the book I needed 12 years ago when I stumbled out of corporate life and into making my own way. The deceptive simplicity of the suggestions tells us one must also be ready to unlearn, and Madelyn makes this possible, in the book and in the brilliant suggestions of taking on a crew to help you. The possibilities on the roles of Accompanier and Practice Partner do much to repair the fabric of work life. Permission to ask for companionship on the journey is perhaps the single most important idea in this book, and one that should be considered by everyone." -Victoria Ward, Founding Partner, Sparknow, London
"Madelyn certainly has her finger on the pulse of the challenges of the worker of the 21st century." -Denise Lee, Senior Knowledge Management Consultant, PricewaterhouseCoopers
