Ages 3-6. The photographs are in full color in this revised edition of a black-and-white photo-essay first published eight years ago. There are very few changes in the text, which is direct, informative, and friendly, telling the child what to expect. The pictures show kids learning through all kinds of play; with a teacher, with other kids, and alone. One sign of the 1990s is a relaxed approach to technology: the child is told that "you may begin to learn how to use a computer," and story time includes listening with earphones to stories on tape. Libraries with heavy preschool audiences will want multiple copies of this cheerful guide. Hazel Rochman
